A federal whistleblower has come forward with allegations that Pennsylvania Governor Josh Shapiro was involved in the July 13, 2024, assassination attempt on former President Donald Trump in Butler, Pennsylvania. The whistleblower, identified as Hadassah Feinberg, a former Pennsylvania State Police employee, filed a criminal complaint on February 7, 2025, detailing claims that Shapiro conspired with other officials to orchestrate the attack as part of a political scheme.

According to the complaint, President Joe Biden made frequent visits to Shapiro in the weeks leading up to the Trump rally to discuss what was described as an "obstacle" faced by the Democratic Party. Feinberg alleges that these meetings were directly tied to a plan to eliminate Trump as a political opponent. The complaint further claims that Shapiro "organized, schemed, and conspired" with state officials to carry out the attack, which resulted in Trump being shot and Corey Comperatore losing his life.

Feinberg also claims that her attempts to report information to authorities were blocked at multiple levels. She alleges that she contacted the Secret Service on July 13, 2024, to provide a tip but was ignored due to interference from the Biden administration. Further communications with Secret Service Agent John T. Donohue were reportedly dismissed, with Feinberg alleging that the complaint was forwarded to headquarters but later suppressed. She also claims that former FBI Director Christopher Wray was involved in covering up the case and that only after his resignation was she able to pursue legal action.

The complaint accuses Shapiro of working alongside Pennsylvania State Police Commissioner Christopher Paris to facilitate and later conceal the assassination attempt. Feinberg alleges that Paris made false statements under oath to the Senate Judiciary Committee in August 2024, blaming the United States Secret Service for security failures to divert attention from Shapiro's alleged involvement. She asserts that Trump was shot from within the Pennsylvania State Police perimeter at the rally, not from an area under Secret Service control, which contradicts official reports.

Beyond the assassination attempt, the complaint alleges a broader pattern of corruption involving Shapiro, including claims that he engaged in election interference in Pennsylvania in 2020, obstructed multiple criminal investigations, and laundered money through Ukraine. Feinberg claims that Shapiro's ties to Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky were evident in a 2024 meeting where Shapiro allegedly signed bombs in a publicized photo op with Zelensky. She argues that Trump's reelection would expose Shapiro's financial dealings, motivating the governor to participate in an effort to eliminate him politically and physically.

The complaint also links billionaire Alex Soros to the alleged plot, claiming that Soros made credible threats against Trump before the assassination attempt. Feinberg asserts that, despite these threats, Soros has never been criminally investigated.

The accusations against Shapiro and Paris have led to legal filings, including a RICO lawsuit in the Pennsylvania Commonwealth Court, where both officials are named in connection with alleged corruption and public fraud. Feinberg states that on February 5, 2025, multiple federal witnesses, including Gregory Stenstrom, Leah Hoopes, and Sean Connolly, provided testimony supporting claims of state and federal crimes committed by Shapiro over the past decade.

Despite the serious nature of the allegations, Butler County District Attorney Richard Goldinger has declined to pursue Feinberg's private criminal complaint. In a letter dated August 22, 2024, Goldinger acknowledged receipt of the complaint but cited ongoing investigations by various government agencies as the reason for disapproval.

As of now, neither Governor Josh Shapiro nor Commissioner Christopher Paris has publicly responded to the allegations.
